Mystery Surrounds Finding of Body of Wealthy Trapper in North-

VANCOUVER, B. C., Feb. 29.-Mystery shrouds the death of Matthew Green, prospector and trapper, whose body was found by Indians near Tete Jeune Cache. The Indians said his skull had been frac-

The Indians said his skull had been fractured by a fall while hunting. They buried the body.

The provincial police, who doubt the story, are investigating, but at the present season it is practically impossible to send any one into the Teta Jeune country to discover evidence.

Although there is no definite ground for suspicion of foul play, there is such mystery about the death of the trapper that the authorities desire to ascertain all the circumstances.

that the authorities desire to ascertain all the circumstances.

Grisen was a well-known trapper. It is reported that at the time of his death hie had about 1300 cash with him, and had ninety-five marten, with a number of other skins, altogether valued at $700.

Green had a fruit farm of forty acres near Wenatchee, Yakima county, Washington, valued at $10,000 or $12,000, and had no need to resort to trapping for a livelihood but was enamored of the open air life, and heades had in view the finding of placer diggings in the district where he spent so much of his life.

The authorities are in communication with his friends in Washington.

In City Creek canyon.

A lengthy communication was received from Land and Water Commissioner MacKnight, answering the charges made by Councilman Fernstrom reflecting on the management of his department. The communication shows the actual working of the department and makes a comparison with former years. Most of the communication consists of matter contained in the commissioner's annual report, and ends commissioner's annual report, and ends with these words: "I deem it unnecessary to reply to that portion of Mr. Fernstrom's remarks relating to the subject of grafting, in view of his long experience and evident familiarity with the term."

The member from the Third argued that the communication cast reflections on former Commissioner I. M. Fisher, and moved that it be referred to that gentleman. The matter, however, was referred to the Committee on Jordan Canal and Irrigation.

FUN AT FERNSTROM'S EXPENSE. Considerable mirth was occasioned by the introduction of a resolution by Councilman Fernstrom alleging that the Republican members were guilty of violation of section 219 of the Revised Statutes, relating to malconduct, by reason of having entered into an agreement to caucus before transacting any of the city business. The resolu-tion provided that a list of the names of all Republican renegades be furnished to the Mayor and that all papers and documents in the hands of the cau-cus affecting the business of the city be submitted to the Council for inspec-
